

Knowledge and Understanding of Religion and Worldviews
	Nursery	Reception	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3	Year 4	Year 5	Year 6
Knowledge	I can talk about people who are important to me. I can recognise that families and communities may have different celebrations and traditions. I can listen to and talk about stories that are special to different people. I can recognise some objects, places and experiences that people consider special. I can notice similarities and differences between my experiences and	I can recognise that people belong to different families, communities and religious or non-religious groups. I can recognise that some people have religious beliefs and that others may have different beliefs or no religious belief. I can identify some celebrations, stories, places and objects that are important	I can identify Islam, Christianity, Sikhism, Hinduism and Judaism as religious traditions. I can identify some ways Muslims express their belonging to Islam. I can identify some ways Christians express their belonging to Christianity. I can identify some ways Sikhs express their belonging to Sikhism. I can identify some ways Hindus express their belonging to Hinduism. I can identify some ways Jewish people express their	I can describe some important beliefs and practices within the religions and worldviews I study. I can identify some religious stories and explain why they are important to believers. I can recognise that sacred texts can be sources of teaching, guidance and meaning for religious people. I can describe how celebrations, worship and traditions can express religious beliefs. I can identify features of places of worship and	I can describe key beliefs within the religious and non-religious worldviews I study. I can explain how religious stories and sacred texts can communicate beliefs and teachings. I can describe how worship, prayer, celebrations and other practices can express belief. I can explain why particular places, objects, people or traditions may have religious significance. I can describe ways religious beliefs can influence people's	I can explain key beliefs and concepts within the religious and non-religious worldviews I study. I can explain how sacred texts, teachings and traditions can provide sources of authority and guidance. I can explain connections between beliefs and religious practices. I can explain how beliefs may influence decisions about how people live and treat others. I can compare beliefs and practices within and between different religious and	I can explain increasingly complex beliefs and concepts within the religious and non-religious worldviews I study. I can explain how sacred texts, teachings, traditions and other sources of authority may influence belief and practice. I can make connections between beliefs about God, humanity, the world and how people choose to live. I can explain how religious and non-religious worldviews can influence responses	I can explain and connect key beliefs, concepts and practices across the religious and non-religious worldviews I have studied. I can explain how sacred texts, teachings, traditions, reason and experience can act as sources of authority for different people. I can analyse connections between belief, identity, practice and ways of living. I can explain how religious and non-religious worldviews may shape responses

	those of other people. I can show curiosity and respect when learning about different families, communities and traditions.	within different communities. I can talk about some ways people express what is important to them. I can recognise that people may worship, celebrate and live in different ways. I can recognise some similarities and differences between different communities and traditions. I can understand that people within the same religion or community may not all believe or practise in	belonging to Judaism. I can recognise that religious belonging may be expressed through beliefs, practices, celebrations, symbols, clothing, places and communities. I can identify similarities and differences in how people express belonging. I can recognise that family, friendship and community can be important sources of belonging for religious and non-religious people.	explain how they are used by communities. I can explain some ways religious and non-religious beliefs can influence how people care for other people and the world. I can recognise similarities and differences between the beliefs and practices I study. I can recognise that individuals within the same religious tradition may express their beliefs differently.	choices and ways of living. I can make connections between beliefs, practices and lived experience. I can compare aspects of different religious and non-religious worldviews using appropriate vocabulary. I can recognise that there is diversity within religious traditions as well as between them.	non-religious worldviews. I can explain how communities express identity and belonging through worship, traditions and shared practices. I can recognise and describe different ways people within the same religious tradition may understand or practise their faith. I can use increasingly precise subject-specific vocabulary when explaining religious ideas.	to moral and social questions. I can compare different perspectives on significant questions within and between worldviews. I can explain how religious identity and practice can be influenced by community, culture and individual experience. I can recognise that religious traditions contain a range of beliefs, interpretations and practices. I can use my accumulated knowledge to make connections between worldviews studied previously and those I am currently studying.	to questions about meaning, purpose, morality, justice and human experience. I can compare different perspectives within as well as between religious and non-religious worldviews. I can explain how religious beliefs and practices may be interpreted and expressed differently by different individuals and communities. I can recognise that people's worldviews can be influenced by religion, culture, community, experience and other sources. I can draw upon knowledge from across my RE learning to explain connections, similarities and differences exactly the same way.						between worldviews. I can use precise religious and worldview vocabulary to communicate increasingly sophisticated understanding.
--	---	--	---	---	--	---	--	---

Vocabulary	Special, family, community, celebration, tradition, story, place, different, same, respect	Belief, religion, community, celebration, tradition, worship, special, sacred, belonging, similarity, difference, respect	Belonging, Islam, Muslim, Christianity, Christian, Sikhism, Hindu, Judaism, Jewish, faith, community, worship, symbol, tradition	Sacred, scripture, worship, belief, practice, tradition, celebration, community, responsibility, creation, care, religious, non-religious	Worldview, belief, sacred text, teaching, worship, prayer, practice, tradition, significance, community, identity, diversity, interpretation	Authority, worldview, sacred text, teaching, practice, identity, belonging, worship, tradition, interpretation, diversity, values, commitment	Perspective, worldview, authority, morality, identity, interpretation, belief, practice, commitment, diversity, community, culture, influence, tradition	Worldview, authority, interpretation, perspective, identity, morality, justice, meaning, purpose, belief, practice, diversity, lived experience, religious, non-religious

Exploring Meaning and Making Connections

	Nursery	Reception	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3	Year 4	Year 5	Year 6
Knowledge	I can talk about people, places and things that are important to me. I can talk about experiences and celebrations that are important to my family and other people. I can notice that different people may find different things special or important. I can identify some similarities and differences between my experiences and those of others. I can talk about feelings such as happiness, sadness, kindness and belonging. I can listen respectfully	I can talk about what it means to belong to a family or community. I can recognise that people may have different beliefs about what is important or special. I can make simple connections between people's beliefs and the things they do. I can talk about ideas such as kindness, fairness, caring and belonging. I can identify similarities and	I can explain what belonging means and identify different groups and communities to which people may belong. I can make connections between religious beliefs and ways people show that they belong. I can identify similarities and differences in how Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Hindus and Jewish people may express belonging. I can recognise that symbols, clothing, celebrations, worship and shared practices can communicate belonging. I can explain why family, friendship and community can	I can make connections between religious stories and the messages or teachings they communicate. I can explain how beliefs can influence the way people care for other people and the world. I can identify similarities and differences in the ways religious and non-religious people may respond to ideas such as care, responsibility and community. I can explain why celebrations and traditions can be important to individuals and communities. I can explore questions about	I can make connections between religious beliefs, practices and people's lived experiences. I can explain how stories, teachings and traditions can communicate ideas about how people should live. I can explore how religious and non-religious worldviews respond to important human questions. I can compare different perspectives on ideas such as belonging, responsibility, fairness and how people should treat others. I can identify similarities and differences between different perspectives	I can explain connections between beliefs, sources of authority, practices and ways of living. I can explore how religious and non-religious worldviews respond to questions about identity, belonging, responsibility and how people should live. I can compare different perspectives on significant human questions. I can explain how beliefs and values may influence decisions and actions. I can identify similarities, differences and connections within as well as between religious and non-religious worldviews.	I can explain how beliefs about humanity, the world and what matters can influence people's values and choices. I can explore religious and non-religious responses to questions about meaning, morality, identity and responsibility. I can compare different perspectives on significant moral and social questions. I can explain how different worldviews may lead people to similar actions for different reasons. I can recognise that individuals may draw upon religion, culture, family, reason and	I can make connections between beliefs, values, identity and ways of living across the religious and non-religious worldviews I have studied. I can explore different responses to significant questions about meaning, purpose, morality, justice, identity and human experience. I can compare and explain perspectives within as well as between different worldviews. I can explain how people's responses to significant questions may be influenced by religion, culture, when other people talk about things that are important to them.	differences between the ways people celebrate, worship or express what matters to them. I can listen to different viewpoints and recognise that people do not always think the same way. I can ask questions about beliefs, celebrations, stories and ways of living.	be important to people. I can recognise that people may belong to religious and non-religious communities. I can recognise that belonging can influence people's identity and the way they treat others. I can discuss different ways people can make others feel that they belong.	what people value and why. I can recognise that people may have different reasons for making similar choices. I can make connections between ideas I encounter in RE and examples of human experience. I can discuss different perspectives respectfully and give a reason for my own response to a question.	without assuming that everyone within a worldview thinks in the same way. I can recognise that beliefs and values can influence people's choices and actions. I can make connections between ideas from different units and worldviews I have studied. I can explain my response to a significant question while recognising that other people may reasonably respond differently.	I can recognise that people may interpret the same belief, teaching or question differently. I can make connections between religious ideas and wider human experiences. I can explain and support my own response to a question while engaging respectfully with different perspectives.	experience when forming their views. I can make connections between beliefs and concepts across different religions and worldviews. I can consider different interpretations within a religious or non-religious worldview. I can develop a reasoned response to a significant question, drawing upon ideas and perspectives I have studied. I can reconsider or refine my thinking after encountering a different perspective.	community, reason and lived experience. I can recognise that people who share a worldview may reach different conclusions about the same moral or philosophical question. I can identify connections, similarities and differences across my previous RE learning. I can consider how beliefs and worldviews can influence individuals, communities and wider society. I can construct a reasoned response to a significant question using relevant examples from the worldviews I have studied. I can engage respectfully with disagreement, consider alternative perspectives and refine my thinking where appropriate.

--	--	--	---	---	--	--	--	---

Vocabulary	Important, special, family, community, celebration, belonging, kindness, same, different, respect	Belonging, belief, community, kindness, fairness, caring, worship, celebration, viewpoint, similarity, difference	Belonging, identity, community, faith, symbol, worship, celebration, tradition, friendship, family, inclusion, respect	Responsibility, care, values, community, teaching, celebration, tradition, perspective, choice, reason, connection	Perspective, worldview, values, responsibility, fairness, belief, practice, lived experience, connection, similarity, difference, viewpoint	Identity, authority, perspective, interpretation, values, responsibility, morality, worldview, connection, diversity, influence, viewpoint	Morality, meaning, perspective, interpretation, reason, experience, culture, values, worldview, influence, argument, reflection, connection	Meaning, purpose, morality, justice, worldview, perspective, interpretation, identity, lived experience, reason, society, disagreement, argument, justify, reflection

Enquiry, Interpretation and Evaluation

	Nursery	Reception	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3	Year 4	Year 5	Year 6
Knowledge	I can ask questions about people, celebrations, stories and things that are special to them. I can look carefully at objects, pictures and other things that help me learn about people's lives. I can listen to stories and talk about what I notice. I can talk about similarities and differences I notice. I can listen when other people share different ideas or experiences. I can give a simple reason for	I can ask questions about beliefs, stories, celebrations, places and ways of living. I can use stories, objects, pictures and people's experiences to find out about different communities and traditions. I can describe what I notice and begin to explain what it might mean. I can identify similarities and differences between what I discover.	I can ask questions about the religions, beliefs and communities I study. I can use stories, objects, symbols, pictures, places and people's experiences to find out about religious belonging. I can identify what a source can tell me about how someone may express their beliefs or belonging. I can identify similarities and differences between examples I investigate. I can recognise that different people may answer the same question differently. I can talk about different viewpoints respectfully.	I can ask relevant questions about beliefs, practices, stories and ways of living. I can use different sources to investigate a religious or non-religious worldview. I can identify information and ideas communicated through stories, sacred texts, objects, images and other sources. I can compare sources and identify similarities and differences. I can recognise that a source may have particular meaning for the people who use or value it. I can identify different responses to a religious or	I can ask increasingly focused questions about religions, worldviews and significant human experiences. I can use a range of sources to investigate beliefs, practices and ways of living. I can distinguish between what a source shows me and what I infer from it. I can explain what a source may reveal about a person's beliefs or worldview. I can compare different sources and perspectives. I can recognise that people within the same religious tradition may have	I can develop questions that help me investigate beliefs, practices and worldviews in greater depth. I can select relevant information from different sources when investigating a question. I can interpret stories, texts, objects, images and lived experiences in their religious or worldview context. I can explain how different sources can provide different kinds of evidence. I can compare different interpretations or perspectives within and between worldviews. I can recognise that the same teaching, text or tradition may be understood	I can formulate questions that allow me to investigate religious and non-religious worldviews in depth. I can select and use relevant sources and evidence when investigating a question. I can consider the context and perspective represented by a source when interpreting it. I can distinguish between evidence, interpretation and opinion. I can compare different interpretations of beliefs, teachings and significant questions. I can explain why people within the same worldview	I can independently formulate significant questions about religions, worldviews and human experience. I can select, compare and use relevant sources and evidence to investigate a question. I can consider the context, purpose and perspective of a source when interpreting what it communicates. I can distinguish between evidence, interpretation, opinion and assertion. I can analyse different interpretations and perspectives within as well as something I think.	I can recognise that people may have different ideas and experiences. I can listen to different viewpoints respectfully. I can give a reason for my response to a question.	I can answer a question using something I have learned as evidence. I can give a simple reason for my conclusion.	significant human question. I can use evidence from my learning when discussing different viewpoints. I can give reasons for my ideas and reach a simple conclusion.	different perspectives. I can use relevant evidence to support an explanation or response. I can discuss different viewpoints and give reasons for my own conclusions. I can recognise when further information might help me answer a question.	differently by different people. I can distinguish between a claim, a reason and evidence used to support it. I can use relevant evidence to develop and support my reasoning. I can reach a conclusion and explain how the evidence has informed it.	may interpret an idea or teaching differently. I can evaluate different claims and consider the reasons and evidence offered in support of them. I can construct a reasoned response using relevant evidence and examples. I can consider alternative perspectives before reaching a conclusion. I can refine my conclusion when further evidence or reasoning gives me a reason to do so.	between religious and non-religious worldviews. I can recognise that disagreement can arise from different interpretations, experiences, sources of authority and ways of reasoning. I can evaluate claims by considering the reasons and evidence used to support them. I can construct a coherent argument using relevant knowledge, examples and evidence. I can respond thoughtfully to alternative arguments and perspectives. I can reach and justify a conclusion while recognising that other people may reach a different reasoned conclusion. I can review and refine my thinking in response to stronger evidence or reasoning.

--	---------------------------	--	---	---	--	---	---	--

Vocabulary	Question, notice, story, object, same, different, idea, reason, listen, wonder	Enquiry, question, evidence, story, object, viewpoint, similarity, difference, explain, reason, respect	Source, evidence, enquiry, question, symbol, viewpoint, compare, similarity, difference, reason, conclusion	Evidence, source, sacred text, enquiry, compare, viewpoint, meaning, response, reason, conclusion, investigate	Infer, evidence, source, perspective, worldview, enquiry, interpretation, compare, explanation, conclusion, relevant	Interpretation, claim, evidence, source, perspective, reasoning, context, relevant, compare, conclusion, justify, enquiry	Evaluate, interpretation, evidence, opinion, claim, argument, perspective, context, reasoning, alternative, conclusion, justify, refine	Assertion, argument, evidence, interpretation, perspective, authority, reasoning, analyse, evaluate, coherent, counterargument, conclusion, justify, refine