

Subject Vision and Intent: PSHE

Our Vision

At King's Cross Academy, we believe that PSHE is fundamental to preparing children to lead happy, healthy and fulfilling lives. Our ambition is for children to leave KCA with the knowledge, confidence and values they need to understand themselves, build positive relationships, make informed decisions and participate successfully in the diverse society in which they are growing up.

Our diverse community provides a rich environment in which children learn with and from one another. We want children to develop a strong sense of their own identity while respecting the identities, experiences and perspectives of others. Through PSHE, children learn that difference is something to understand and value and that everyone has a responsibility to contribute to communities in which people feel safe, respected and included.

Our PSHE curriculum is closely connected to our Academy vision, Love Learning Together, and our six KCA values: Courage, Respect, Kindness, Integrity, Endurance and Aspiration. These values provide children with a shared language through which they can understand their choices, relationships and responsibilities. We want children not simply to know our values, but to increasingly demonstrate them through their actions and interactions with others.

Our Intent

Our PSHE curriculum is ambitious, inclusive and carefully sequenced. It identifies the essential knowledge, vocabulary, concepts and personal development we want children to build from the Early Years to Year 6, including the statutory content of Relationships and Health Education.

Children develop progressively secure knowledge of relationships, physical and mental health, safety, the wider world and their rights and responsibilities. Important ideas are deliberately revisited as children mature, allowing them to encounter increasingly complex situations with greater knowledge, understanding and confidence.

Through learning about relationships, children develop an understanding of friendship, families, respect, boundaries and appropriate behaviour. They learn to recognise the characteristics of healthy relationships, resolve disagreements appropriately, respect difference and understand how and when to seek help.

Through learning about physical and mental health, children develop the knowledge they need to make informed choices about their wellbeing. They learn about healthy lifestyles, emotions and feelings, the importance of looking after their bodies and minds, and strategies that can help them manage challenges and change.

Children are taught how to keep themselves and others safe, both in the physical and digital worlds. They learn to recognise risk, understand personal boundaries, respond to situations that make them uncomfortable and identify trusted adults and sources of support. Online safety is reinforced across PSHE and Computing so that children develop the knowledge and judgement needed to navigate digital environments safely and responsibly.

Children also learn about their place within communities and the wider world. They explore rights and responsibilities, diversity, money, the environment and the different ways in which people contribute to society. Children are encouraged to ask questions, express their own perspectives, listen carefully to others and discuss issues respectfully.

PSHE provides important opportunities for children to develop their voice. Discussion, reflection and carefully structured opportunities to explore different perspectives help children learn to articulate what they think, explain why they think it and disagree respectfully. We want children to understand that their voices matter while recognising that other people have the same right to be heard.

Every Child

We have high expectations for every child. Children with SEND, children who are disadvantaged and children who are developing English as an additional language access the same ambitious PSHE curriculum.

Teachers create safe, respectful and inclusive environments in which children can participate without feeling that they are expected to share personal experiences. Teaching is adapted so that important concepts, vocabulary and safety messages are understood by all children, while expectations for their learning remain high.

We recognise that children arrive at school with different experiences, relationships and levels of prior knowledge. Our curriculum therefore ensures that essential knowledge about relationships, health, wellbeing and safety is explicitly taught rather than assumed.

Where children need additional support, PSHE works alongside our wider pastoral and safeguarding provision. Children are taught that asking for help is a positive action and are helped to identify the trusted adults and support available to them.

Personal Development Beyond PSHE

Personal development at KCA extends beyond the PSHE lesson. Children have opportunities throughout school life to practise the knowledge, behaviours and values they learn through the curriculum.

Our KCA values, assemblies, pupil leadership, enrichment opportunities, wider curriculum and experiences within our local community provide opportunities for children to develop confidence, independence and responsibility. Children learn that contributing to a community involves listening to others, making thoughtful choices and taking responsibility for the impact of their actions.

As children progress through KCA, we want them to become increasingly able to recognise our six values in their own behaviour. Courage, Respect, Kindness, Integrity, Endurance and Aspiration become more than words: they provide a framework through which children can reflect upon who they are becoming and how they contribute to the lives of others.

By the end of Year 6, our aim is not simply that children know how to answer questions about relationships, health or safety, but that they can draw upon this knowledge when making decisions in their own lives. We want them to understand themselves, recognise healthy relationships, know how to seek help, respect people who are different from them and contribute positively to their communities.

Above all, we want children to leave KCA as confident, compassionate and responsible young people, equipped with the knowledge, values and voice they need to navigate the next stage of their lives and participate thoughtfully in a diverse, modern society.
